Favors State Control California Highways

COUNTY OF SAN DIEGO
San Diego, California
Office of the
BOARD OF SUPERVISORS
March 5, 1935.

Dear Editor:

Will you kindly give space in your paper for the following article:

Assembly Bill No. 423

This bill involves the principle of the State of California taking over all the roads into one State Highway system. The plan is to set up the roads in three divisions—primary, secondary and county roads. The system would be under the State Highway Commission, which would assume full jurisdiction of all roads in the state and take all the gas tax money to improve and maintain them.

This, to my mind, is the most progressive piece of legislation introduced in the present legislature. It is more far-reaching and will have a more permanent, beneficial effect for all the people of the state, regardless of location, than any other bill submitted. Allow me to relate some of the good features of this plan.

First it would put our state roads under competent engineers (California is fortunate in having some of the most capable highway engineers in the world in her employ) and eliminate about fifty-eight pseudo-county engineers. A few counties have competent engineers, but most of the counties can afford little or no salary and obtain their services accordingly.

The highways have ceased to be a local problem. In the horse-and-buggy days the radius of travel was about thirty-five miles; today it is nearer five hundred miles, with good roads and modern automobiles. A man traveling today will traverse ten or fifteen counties, and if left to the five supervisors of each county, you will have seventy-five ideas of standards on your roads in one day's journey.

With one department handling all roads and one overhead, instead of fifty-eight, it stands to reason you should receive almost twice the service for your money. In our own county the state took over about three hundred miles of roads two years ago, and I believe has improved them more since it took control than the county had in the previous ten years.

The opposition to this bill can be roughly placed in three classes: County Supervisors who fear they might lose some political prestige; many county employees who fear it might jeopardize their jobs, and a large group of home-rule advocates. The County Supervisors took this same attitude when the State took over the Highway Patrol six years ago and put up the same arguments. No one would think of going back to the old system now. County employees who know their work and do it should have no fear, as some one must carry on and the Administration has signified its willingness to keep them. Home rule for service

May Company Report Residence Sales

A dozen or more residence properties at Ocean Beach have been sold within the last month and while we are not at liberty to report all the deals at this time, the following sales are reported by the May Co.:

The George Ulrich frame cottage at 4749 Muir avenue sold to R. G. Hollen, a Navy man.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Bickford bought the nearly new stucco residence at corner Muir avenue and Abbott street and are freshening this up with a coat of paint. This property joins the home Bickfords bought a little over a year ago on Muir avenue. Apparently they are well satisfied with Ocean Beach for they also recently bought another piece of property belonging to Agnes K. Mills on Brighton, between Abbott street and the ocean.

Henry J. Warren bought a rental property from Louis Mairot, located at 5075 Muir avenue.

Then Mairot was sold the John Kidwell property at 4851 Voltaire street, which it was said would be enlarged for business purposes.

Mrs. Minnie H. Brown's two cottages at 4922-26 Saratoga avenue, sold to A. Sidney Smith, who previously resided here and owned property at corner Froude and Brighton. Mrs. Brown is a real old timer at Ocean Beach. She and her husband had a store in the early days. Now she hopes to travel about a bit and look over part of the United States.

Another good property reported sold by the May Co. to Carl B. Nelson and wife is the splendid brick house at 4603 Cape May avenue, a corner residence, built by James J. Billups a few years ago. Mr. Nelson is a Master Sergeant in Army service and expects to make his home here when he retires early in 1936.

CAHILL TO BUILD ACROSS THE STREET FROM NEWS

A. E. Cahill, who owns the corner on Bacon street, north of Bank of America, we are told, is considering putting in some store buildings in the very near future.

One of the stores will be occupied by Lamb's Market, next door to their present quarters. Walter has been in the grocery business now nearly four years and feels it is time to expand into larger quarters.

versus centralization for economy, is an old economic problem. This plan would eliminate the possibility of levying an ad valorem road tax in the future.

In my opinion the advantages we gain far overshadow any possible losses that I am unequivocally in favor of the plan for the state to take over all the roads and all the gas tax, and administer them under the high standard set up by the State Highway Commission.

Very truly yours,
Edgar F. Hastings, Chairman,
San Diego County Board of Supervisors.

Exposition Plans Hold Appreciative of New and Old Subscribers

In many respects the California Pacific International Exposition, opening May 29th at Balboa Park, offers features that cannot be duplicated by any other exposition site, and many salient attractions that could only be rivalled at prohibitive cost in a few strategic locations.

Situated on a high plateau overlooking the city of San Diego and the neighboring Pacific Ocean, the structures of this vast enterprise are set amid rolling hills, deep ravines, wooded knolls and a profusion of trees, shrubs and flowers that bloom the year round.

It was to this enchanted land that Juan Rodriguez Cabrillo came in the year 1542, thirty-nine years after Ponce de Leon landed in Florida and sixty-five years before the first settlement at Jamestown, Virginia.

The oldest palm tree in California still grows near Old Town, San Diego, and the Mission San Diego de Alcalá was the first of that chain of California missions founded by Fra Junipero Serra. Here, too, are the first olive trees ever planted in America and they still bear fruit.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT TO VISIT EXPOSITION

San Diego and the California Pacific International Exposition will play host this summer to President Roosevelt and many other distinguished visitors from Washington, according to word brought back by G. A. Davidson, chairman of the board of directors of the Exposition, who arrived home after a sixty-day trip to several Eastern cities.

Definite assurance that he would visit the Exposition was given by the President to Mr. Davidson during a recent interview in the national capital. No exact date of arrival here was disclosed by Mr. Roosevelt, but it is generally believed that the trip will be made in mid-summer.

WOMEN INSURANCE AGENTS

One of the year's most important conventions of American business women will assemble at the California Pacific International Exposition on Saturday, September 14, when the Women's Benefit Association sends ten thousand delegates and friends to view the world's fair.

"FLOOR OF PACIFIC OCEAN"

There are spots so deep in the Pacific Ocean that the world's highest peak, Mt. Everest, could submerge there and have several thousand feet of water above.

That interesting fact is borne out by sounding tests made for four years by the U. S. S. Ramapo, under direction of Captain Claude Banks Mayo, U. S. N.

Strikingly depicted on a relief map, showing the way the Pacific would look if it were waterless, the information compiled from 17,239 separate soundings is offered at the Palace of Natural History of the California Pacific International Exposition.

7,000-BEAD INDIAN NECKLACE

Modern maidens who yearn for a real pearl necklace probably had a counterpart in that girl of the ancient Mojave Indians, who treasured her 7,000-bead clam shell necklace so much that it accompanied her in death.

That is the conclusion the spectator might draw after viewing this unique relic which is housed with thousands of other treasures of Indian lore in the Palace of Science of the California Pacific International Exposition.

MANY STATES TO BE REPRESENTED

Under direction of Capt. T. J. Molinari, Federation President, plans are being made to index every county in every state, and register San Diego Federation members by that system. Visitors also will register by that system.

Twenty states are represented in the San Diego Federation now, with Alabama, Arizona and Oklahoma in the organization process. Captain Molinari announced. The Daughters of Scotia, composed of former Nova Scotians, are also in the union, as well as a group from the New England society. By the time the Exposition opens on May 29, fifteen more states will have been added to the roster.

FORD OFFICIAL VISITS EXPO.

Declaring the West faces a new era of prosperity, which is symbolized by the California Pacific International Exposition, W. C. Cowling, personal representative of Henry and Edsel Ford, broke ground here for the huge exhibit palace of the Ford Motor Company.

"The entire nation is sympathetic to the Exposition," Cowling said. "The Ford Motor Company is participating in the Exposition for several reasons. California and the West always have been good to us, and our exhibit is in recognition of the splendid interest of the people in the West."

Accompanying Cowling were D. J. Hutchins, commercial division manager; H. Butkiewicz, business development manager, Universal Credit company; C. A. Bullwinkel, manager, Richmond branch; Ira B. Groves, manager, Long Beach branch; W. R. Beattie, assistant manager, Long Beach branch and several local Ford dealers and representatives. Mr. Cowling will leave for Detroit this week, continuing his tour through the southwest.

EXPOSITION PHOTOGRAPHIC FIFTH ANNUAL SALON

When the Palace of Photography opens May 29, many nations will be represented in the Fifth Annual Salon of Photography, one of the outstanding photographic events of the year.

Entries in this exhibit have been received from England, Germany, Belgium, Austria, Switzerland, Roumania, Czechoslovakia, Japan, China, and Mexico, while inquiries have been received from camera artists in many other parts of the world.

Council Changes Mind Forum Speaker Defends About Collier Park Private Ownership

The extreme stupidity of the San Diego city council was again shown Tuesday when it refused to go ahead with plans to let the people of the city vote at the coming spring election to deed a portion of unimproved Collier park from the city to the school board.

The city has taken not one iota of interest in improving Collier park the many years they have had it, however, when it comes to letting it be put to good use for school purposes, wherein the people will not lose any benefits, but actually derive more, these incompetents again show that they are not working for the benefit of the people of San Diego, but apparently for personal gain.

At Point Loma High school now there are almost twice the number of pupils the school was built to accommodate. The wood and tin shops as well as the men's study room, the cafeteria and the lobby of the auditorium are used for class rooms. A remedy must be found for the overcrowding but our city council evidently will lend no helping hand, even though it may be done without money outlay.

When the school board asked the city for a part of this unimproved park, it looked as though they would acquiesce. Two weeks ago the council said the citizens of Ocean Beach had not given their approval of the project. The matter was immediately taken up by the Ocean Beach PTA, Chamber of Commerce, Kiwanis club, Woman's club, Veterans of Foreign Wars and others, who all signified in separate letters to the council that they had discussed the matter in their meetings and found it to be a highly favorable and necessary project. Then last week the council voted approval of the proposition being placed on the spring election ballot. Now, Tuesday, March 5th, daily news reports show that City Attorney Byers advised the council it was too late for them to go thru the necessary formalities connected with abandoning park areas. He advised them that unless they wanted to call a special election, the proposition would of necessity have to go over until the next regular election. Councilmen thought the expense of a special election would not be justified.

The present council has been famous for ignoring the actual needs of the people they were supposed to serve but lavish in expenditure where it benefitted those who they desired to favor.

Perhaps we'll find a little later on where some friend has a plot of real estate they think desirable for a junior high school.

What do you think?

The News does Job Printing

The Town Forum held Tuesday evening at the Ocean Beach school auditorium was not as well attended as the meeting of the week previous, however there was some sixty to seventy-five interested citizens present.

T. Morley Harvey, pianist and composer, gave three selections of his own composition. Mrs. Hazel Orcutt, soloist, sang first, three classical solos and following, Mr. Harvey's piano selections, sang an additional three which he had written.

G. H. P. Dellman, commercial lighting expert of the San Diego Consolidated Gas & Electric Co., gave a highly instructive talk on why private owned utilities served the public better and at lower cost than light and gas utilities would if publicly owned.

The speaker stated among other things that the average annual cost to the average user of gas and electricity was about $30; that there had been a great decrease in cost of this service to the public while a more highly efficient service was being given all the time. He said that many think little of spending more than this $30 annually for amusement, for smoking or in various other ways where they do not receive near the benefit and convenience that they do with gas and electricity in their homes. He said the public should realize that of every dollar paid by them to the privately owned utility, 15 per cent is returned to the various governmental bodies in the form of taxes.

Industry generally is not for government ownership and in many localities (such as San Diego) politics would play to great a part. When a citizen makes a great talk for public ownership it is usually for political and not economic reasons.

Many questions came from the floor at the close of the address, one being, what is the cost of manufacture of one kilowatt of electricity. The speaker stated about five mills for actual manufacture, however, distribution must be taken into consideration and that locally a 34 million dollar plant was used for this purpose.

Mr. Dellman was very well versed on his subject and gave satisfactory answers to all questions presented.

Announcement will be made in these columns next week in regard to the forum subject and speaker March 19th.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE TO MEET MONDAY EVENING

Monday night, March 11, is the regular monthly meeting night for the Ocean Beach Chamber of Commerce.

The Woman's clubhouse is the place and the time is 8 p. m.

All interested citizens are invited to come and help build a livelier and better community.

CURRENT EVENTS PASS IN REVIEW

ADMINISTRATION GOLD LAWS SUSTAINED BY DECISION OF SUPREME COURT.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT and the New Dealers breathed easier after the United States Supreme court handed down its decision sustaining invalidation of "gold clauses" in private contracts, but not on federal bonds.

President Roosevelt

While it was held that the government must pay off its bonds in gold or its equivalent in devalued currency, another ruling that the Court of Claims had no jurisdiction over such cases means that it would be impossible for holders of federal bonds to collect on their old gold basis. In other words, the holder of a $1,000 federal bond is entitled to a technical value of $1,000, but in reality it would be impractical to make any collection of that amount, since the Court of Claims is the only tribunal before which suits against the government may be taken, and other courts may not entertain such suits without a special act of congress.

The court also held that those who held gold certificates had no cause of action and could not sue the government. The power of congress to deal with currency was fully upheld.

Not only this country, but the entire world, awaited what the "nine lonely old men" of the Supreme court had to say about the Roosevelt monetary policies. The decision is ranked with the court's decisions in the Dartmouth college cases in 1818 which upheld the sanctity of contract, and in the Dred Scott slavery case in 1857 which had much to do with hastening the outbreak of the Civil war.

Briefly, the ruling said:

1. Congress has the power to nullify promises to pay in gold contained in the bonds of private corporations.

2. A gold certificate is worth only its face value in present devalued currency. Congressional power over the currency includes the right to establish circumstances under which gold certificates need not be redeemed in gold or its equivalent.

3. Congress has no authority under the Constitution to abrogate the payment-in-gold clause of government bonds, but, as no actual damage has been shown, therefore there is no basis for suit for recovery.

The decision was read by Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes, who voted with Justices Brandeis, Stone, Roberts and Cardozo in the majority. Dissenters were Justices McReynolds, Van Devanter, Sutherland and Butler, the four so-called conservatives.

Satisfaction within the administration was evident at once.

Justice McReynolds was spokesman for the dissenters. He unleashed a scathing attack on the majority views. His voice vibrant, he said:

"The Constitution as we have known it is gone."

"If given effect, the enactments here challenged will bring about confiscation of property, rights and repudiation of national obligations."

"Just men regard spoliation of citizens by their sovereign with abhorrence, but we are asked to affirm that the Constitution has granted power to accomplish both."

"No definite delegation of such a power exists; and we cannot believe the farseeing framers, who labored with hope of establishing justice and securing the blessings of liberty, intended that the expected government should have authority to annihilate its own obligations and destroy the very rights which they were endeavoring to protect."

Notified that Chief Justice Hughes was reading the decision, President Roosevelt went to the cabinet room, where he listened to telephone reports from an aid. Three cabinet officers were at his side. The Chief Executive was prepared to take swift action to protect the credit of the government in case an adverse decision was handed down, but executive orders were unnecessary. The carefully prepared program was not needed.

After a three-hour conference between the President and administration leaders, Attorney General Cummings said:

"As far as they concern us, the decisions constitute a complete victory for the government all along the line."

The announcement caused stock and commodity markets to soar, and because of the speculative frenzy, the Chicago Board of Trade suspended all trading temporarily in accordance with a recent resolution of the directors. Grain exchanges in other cities did likewise. Stock exchanges remained open and the ticker was soon nine minutes behind the trading. Railroad stocks were particularly strong in view of the decision which held the carriers would not be obliged to liquidate their obligations in the new currency at the present price of gold. Had an adverse decision been handed down, a number of the country's strongest lines would have been forced into bankruptcy.

HOSTILITIES between Senator Long and Postmaster General Farley moved swiftly toward a climax. Without objection the senate adopted Huey's resolution demanding that Secretary of the Interior Ickes supply to that body any information he may have regarding investigations of public works contracts with which Farley may have been connected. The postmaster general, who was in Sarasota, Fla., said merely: "I do not take it seriously."

Long did not get along so well with his demand for a senatorial investigation of Farley. It was referred to the post office committee, and Chairman McKellar said: "If there is anything to be investigated it will be investigated. But I don't know what the acts are. My committee will invite Farley and Long before it and will settle the matter on its merits as shown by the facts adduced."

DR. F. E. Townsend of California, whose pension plan for the aged has gained the support of many thousands of thoughtful citizens, went before the senate finance committee and tried to explain how the government could get out of its economic troubles by paying $200 monthly pensions to all persons over sixty, provided each one must spend his $200 for commodities or services within the country each month. The senators didn't treat the proposition with much seriousness.

Chairman Harrison said that with 10,000,000 or more aged, the plan would cost $24,000,000,000 a year. But a 2 per cent tax would raise only $5,000,000,000, leaving a deficit of $19,000,000,000 a year.

"Yes," Townsend said, "but we will not be able to put 10,000,000 on the pension immediately. It took two years to get 4,000,000 men into the army. We would have to examine each citizen for his citizenship and age, as we examined applicants for the army."

REPUBLICAN heavy guns, some light ones and a few Democratic mortars bombarded the $4,880,000,000 work relief bill in the senate, and then the administration forces had a breathing spell over the week-end during which they worked hard to win over those members of their own party who were consorting with the enemy.

Senator Vandenberg of Michigan attacked the measure with bitterness and sarcasm, suggesting this substitute bill:

"1. Congress hereby appropriates $4,880,000,000 to the President to use as he pleases.

"2. Anybody who doesn't like it is fined $1,000."

Senator Adams of Colorado, Democrat, who fears an appropriation of the size asked will damage the credit of the nation, carried to the floor the amendment that had been beaten in committee, namely, cutting the total amount to $2,880,000,000.

Senator McCarren of Nevada, also a Democrat, was still arguing for his plan that the committee had rejected and the administration opposed, fixing work relief wages at the rates prevailing in different localities. The bill as modified by the senate appropriations committee after long controversy requires that prevailing rates be paid if the President finds wages in private industry are being undermined.

Vandenberg in the course of his speech asserted the bill would permit the government to compete with any business it pleased. In reply to this Senator Mahoney of Wyoming, who had just called on the President, said from the White House steps that Mr. Roosevelt is determined to authorize only projects that will not compete with private industry, and also that he "will use all his influence to maintain rates of wages and standards in private industry."

In a party conference the Republicans agreed to try to limit the bill to one year instead of two. Their reason is that as it stands the measure gives the President authority to allocate funds for projects through the months when the 1936 Presidential campaign will be going on. Most of the Republicans also favored the prevailing wage amendment, and some of them supported the plan fathered by Adams. The administration Democrats were still confident they could put the bill through without serious changes.

LIEUT. GALVIN M. BOLSTER, a member of the crew of the Macon, gave some sensational testimony before the naval board of inquiry into the causes of the disaster that befell the dirigible. He said that several months ago three girders in the ship's tail had sheared, and that only minor repairs had been made because the bureau of aeronautics ordered that the work should not interfere with training flights. Bolster added that this work had not been completed when the Macon started on her last flight, but that he did not consider the craft unsafe for flight over the ocean except in extremely violent air.

The same indication of structural weakness also was given by R. J. Davis, chief boatswain's mate, one of two crewmen on duty near the "casualty" spot in the rear.

All four fins, two horizontal and two vertical, were fastened to the allegedly weak girder, known technically as "No. 17 1/2."

Commander P. L. Katch, judge advocate of the court, made pointed inquiries to determine if progressive bumpings encountered in anchoring the Macon at its Sunnyvale base might have strained the girder. The lower fin was attached to the ground car in the anchoring operation.

Bolster said such was a possibility, but he did not see how such jars could hurt the upper part of the girder, where the casualty occurred.

GERMANY'S reply to the Anglo-French proposals for a European security pact was not very specific but "welcomed the spirit of trustful discussion between the individual governments" and promised that the reich would examine thoroughly "the whole document concerning the European questions contained in it." The note declared the air agreement might be one step toward solution of other problems, and promised that Germany would examine the question of how to avoid the danger of an armaments race. No mention was made of the proposed Danubian and Eastern pacts. It was believed in London that meetings would soon be held between British and German cabinet ministers.

EVIDENCE introduced in the hearing on the government claim that Andrew W. Mellon, former secretary of the treasury, showed that Mellon has paid the United States government in income taxes in the 21 years since the law was enacted, a total of $21,223,473, or an average of over $1,000,000 a year. The government claims the banker and industrialist has evaded payment of $3,000,000. As the hearing began, the government amended its claim to ask for an additional $9,000 alleged to represent profits on sale of bank stock, which was intended to indicate that the former secretary of the treasury owned bank stock while holding the cabinet post. The treasury secretary is an ex-officio member of the Federal Reserve board on which no member who owns bank stock may serve. Mellon has filed a counter claim alleging overpayment of $130,000 on 1931 taxes and seeks a refund.

A SPECTACULAR break for liberty was made by 31 inmates of the Oklahoma state reformatory at Granite. A tower guard was killed by the prisoners. Thirteen of the convicts were captured within a short time, and posses are engaged in a gigantic man hunt for the remainder. The break followed investigation into a report of cruel treatment of the inmates. From two smuggled pistols the plot expanded suddenly to its deadly climax. The ring leaders seized a trusty prisoner serving as turnkey, took from him his keys, rounded up all the inside turnkeys and locked them in a cell. The mob then rushed into the visitor's room where they herded about twenty visitors together, and using them as a shield, made their escape. The reformatory is under the administration of Mrs. G. A. Waters, said to be the only woman warden of a male prison in the country.

A NEW assault on Germany's unemployment problem is announced by Nazi leaders, who will put their plan into effect on April 1. The scheme, the most drastic yet announced, will force most young people to give up their paying jobs and join the government labor service which will send them to construction projects, "voluntary" labor camps, and to farms.

In this way, positions will be opened for older men and those with dependents. All jobs for persons under twenty-five will be state-controlled, and the entire labor market will be under Nazi domination. Jobless at the present time are estimated at 2,000,000. Another feature of the campaign is the setting of a definite goal of 800,000 as the number to be left without work as "chronically unemployed."

STEPS to curb the inroads of Japanese landholders in the rich hemp growing province of Davao are being taken by the Philippine government. Strict application of insular laws governing land holdings by aliens will be made, according to Eulogio Rodriguez, secretary of agriculture, who schemes a wholesale cancellation of subleases of public lands, which he maintains are illegal. A recent survey, Rodriguez asserts, shows the Japanese control 126,000 acres in the province, and that leases to 64,372 acres are illegally held.

BRUNO HAUPTMANN will die in the electric chair at Trenton, N. J., during the week of March 18, unless attorneys secure a stay of execution by filing an appeal. The prisoner showed no trace of emotion as the jurors announced their verdict and did not break under the strain until after Justice Trenchard had pronounced sentence, and he was returned to his cell.

The jurors required more than 12 hours to reach their verdict. Two of the women were said to have held out for a recommendation of mercy which would have resulted in a life sentence for the man accused of the murder of the Lindbergh baby, but there was no mention of mercy when the verdict was read.

Forty-eight hours after his conviction, Hauptmann was taken to the state prison at Trenton, N. J., where he was entered as convict No. 17,400. A strict censorship has been clamped down as far as his activities are concerned. Every precaution is being taken to prevent his escape, a special guard has been put over the prisoner, and two men are stationed in the look out towers armed with riot guns, tear gas and revolvers.

REALM LEADER HITLER refused to exercise his prerogative of mercy and two Berlin society women were beheaded by the official executioner for divulging military secrets. Another woman and a Polish nobleman were sentenced to life imprisonment at hard work.

Where Hauptmann Awaits Death March to Chair

A view of the Trenton (N. J.) prison where Bruno Hauptmann, convicted of the most horrible crime of the century, awaits the death march that will end at the electric chair. Unless a higher court intervenes, Hauptmann must accept at face value the legend written in Greek over the portals "All hope abandon ye who enter here."

The prisoner is the first kidnaper-murderer to be confined in the Trenton prison and will be kept in strictly solitary confinement, according to acting Warden George L. Selby, who expressed fear for Hauptmann's life if he were allowed to mingle with any other prisoner.

COL. LINDBERGH

LOOKS HAGGARD

Hauptmann looked haggard as he was brought into the courtroom to hear the verdict of the jury. His face was covered with a dark stubble of beard and his clothes appeared badly rumpled. As the jurors took their place in the box, he glanced at them, and must have seen that the verdict was unfavourable, for he was seen to slump in his seat for the first time, and thereafter he looked straight ahead while waiting for the judge to appear.

THE VICTIM

A striking photograph of the dead Lindbergh child whose tragic death shocked the world. Now his slayer will pay with his life to balance the scales of justice, a jury has decided.

Where Bruno Will Spend Last Hours

In this death cell Bruno Hauptmann will spend his final hours of life. Death cells are ten feet wide and twelve feet long and have only a cot for furnishings. Mrs. Hauptmann will be permitted to visit her husband, prison authorities said, although he will see his son only once—just before he dies. Hauptmann occupies No. 1 cell of "murderers' row" in the death house, in which 110 condemned men have preceded him.

Fatal Evidence Against Hauptmann

The money and its wrapping which were found in the garage of Bruno Hauptmann in the Bronx and identified as part of the Lindbergh ransom money. It is believed that possession of this money was the deciding factor that brought a verdict of guilty. Hauptmann's story that this cash was given him by the dead Isidore Fisch never could be substantiated by the defense, and this point carried more weight than any other with the jury.

The End of the Kidnap Trail

The room of death in Trenton state prison containing the electric chair in which Bruno Hauptmann will pay for his crime against society. The death chamber is only eight strides away from the cell Hauptmann occupies. This is the end of the trail for the man whose crime aroused an entire nation to the necessity of more stringent laws for kidnapers.

Let Our Motto Be GOOD HEALTH

BY DR. LLOYD ARNOLD
Professor of Bacteriology and Preventive
Medicine, University of Illinois,
College of Medicine.

THE INFECTIOUS COLD

A good many infectious diseases give you immunity when you have had one attack, but not a cold. You can be just over one, and contract another the next day.

So far, medical science has not been able to isolate the germ that causes the infectious cold. The germ is so infinitesimally small that it goes through every bacterial filter we have in our laboratories, and it cannot be seen with the microscope. But some day some scientist will be able to "catch" it in some kind of net, and then when we can isolate it from other germs, we will be able to work on it, and the same scientist, or some others, will be able to discover the way of killing it. Let us hope these discoveries come soon. The common cold is certainly the cause of an amazing amount of discomfort in this world.

Medical science, however, has learned that there are two types of colds—one that is contagious and one that is not. The non-contagious type is the one that most chronic head cold sufferers have. The infectious type is the one that most of us get. It is the one that comes in "waves."

Medical science, too, has determined pretty well that we all have the cold virus (a germ is called a virus when it is so small that you cannot see it with a microscope) in our noses and throats constantly. When we are well the cold virus doesn't bother us any more than a dust spot on healthy skin bothers us. But let us get below par, then—well, the cold virus is there ready to attack, and loses no time "getting in its work."

In experiments which we have been carrying on in the University of Illinois, we have learned that the temperature of the lining of the nose has a great deal to do with whether or not we are resistant to a cold. Briefly the action is this: In a normal healthy person, when cold water or cold air strikes the body anywhere, the temperature of the lining membrane of the nose drops instantly below normal, and before the temperature of the skin drops. Then within the space of a few minutes, the temperature of the lining of the nose rises above normal and stays there long enough to counteract the bad effect of the below normal period. Then it settles back to normal. In other words, a healthy body machinery has the ability to adapt itself, within reason, to exposure to cold, and to ward off its ill effects.

But now supposing the body is below par. Then when cold air strikes the skin at any spot, the temperature of the nose goes down instantaneously, but instead of going up again immediately as it should, it stays down for perhaps half an hour or longer. And when the blood flows away from the surface for longer than ten minutes, we have found, the cold germs seize the chance to get in their work, and in a very short time our noses are running and we are sneezing. The cold germs are multiplying by the millions and ready to fasten themselves on any person that comes in contact with our wet handkerchiefs or the spray from our mouth. It is in this beginning stage that the common cold is most infectious.

But it is now that quick work on our part can often stop the cold. If we can get the temperature of the nose to rise above normal for a while so that we can sweat and the blood in the nose can come to the surface to battle against the germs, and we can rest our bodies for a bit, the chances are pretty good that we can conquer the cold within a few hours. The best tactics to use at this time are those grandmother used—a steaming hot foot bath while wrapped in blankets, a hot lemonade to drink, a warm bed to get into, and then rest there until the next morning.

But if the soft underlying tissues of the nose become water-logged with serum filtered through the walls of the blood capillaries, the cold will run its normal course. It is too late to try to abort it when the serum is deposited in the tissues outside of the blood vessels. Nothing will remove the clotted serum within the walls of the nose except the ferments in the white blood corpuscles. This third and last stage is not considered by most authorities to be so infectious as the first and second stages.

The best way to prevent infectious head colds is to keep the lining of the nose and its underlying vascular network in a normal state of function.

The skin of the whole body must be kept in "tone," and this can be done by a warm morning bath followed by a cool shower, or at least a washing of the face, arms and hands with cold water and a cool rubdown of the rest of the body. Then be out in the open air at least an hour a day. Eat plenty of fruit, vegetables, dairy products, lean meats, and go easy on starches and sweets.

And avoid as you would a pestilence, the person who is in the sneezing stage of a cold and who is showering the air with germs. No one is resistant enough to withstand a too big dose of fresh cold germs.

Descendants of Evangeline's Clan on Move

LIKE their ancestral Acadians, more than 150 years ago, most famed of whom was Evangeline, these trappers and their families are gathered, awaiting transportation away from the scenes of their livelihood. The circumstances, however, are quite different. Evangeline's clan was driven out of Canada by the British. The descendants of that band, pictured here were brought from their homes in southwest Louisiana to a 90,000-acre tract of marsh below New Orleans by a fur syndicate, as trappers. Only the intervention of a United States marshal and forty deputies averted a massacre when residents of the marsh, feeling themselves cheated of a livelihood, rose up in arms against the invaders and protested with weapons and fire. The Cajans, as they are now called, were mobilized by marshals and gladly went to their homes 200 miles distant. They are shown preparing to leave the place for the journey home.

REDDY FOX QUARRELS FOOLISHLY

AS REDDY FOX sat glaring up at Terror the Goshawk, whose arrival from the Far North had spoiled Reddy's hunting in the Green Forest, he grew angrier and angrier. He grew so angry that presently he walked over until he was almost under Terror the Goshawk. "What right have you down here in the Green Forest?" he snarled.

"The same right you have, Reddy Fox," retorted Terror.

"It's no such thing," snapped Reddy. "You haven't the same right here I have. You belong up in the Far North, while I live here all year round. Why don't you stay where you belong?"

"Since when have you owned the Green Forest?" replied Terror. "I would have you to know, Reddy Fox, that I go where I please. I have found very good hunting here these last few days, and I think I shall stay the rest of the winter. What are you going to do about it?"

That question was too much for Reddy Fox. If Terror had been a four-legged person like himself there might have been ways to make things most uncomfortable for him. As it was, there wasn't a single thing Reddy could do, and he knew it.

"You're a great, big bully and coward," snarled Reddy. You know it is an easy matter to call people you hate bad names.

Terror merely chuckled. It was a hateful chuckle and made Reddy angrier than ever. "So I'm a coward, am I," said Terror. "Think again, Reddy; think again. It is you who are a coward, not I. I fear nothing and no one. Just to settle the question I dare you to go up to Farmer Brown's and steal a chicken from his henyard while he is about."

"That's a silly dare," snarled Reddy. "You are daring me to do something you don't dare do yourself. You know well enough you'll keep away from that henyard as long as Farmer Brown is about."

"Is that so?" snapped Terror, and the feathers on the top of his head began to rise in anger. "I never dare anybody to do what I don't dare do myself."

"Huh!" retorted Reddy Fox. "Talk is cheap." He said this with an unpleasant sneer.

Terror's fierce eyes blazed with rage. "I never boast," he declared. "I dare you to go to Farmer Brown's henyard right now and prove who is the coward."

Reddy Fox couldn't very well back out. He tried to think of an excuse, but for the life of him he couldn't.

"All right," said he, "I'll take your dare."

QUESTION BOX

by ED WYNN, The Perfect Fool

Dear Mr. Wynn:

I am a girl twenty-three years old and have lived all my life in the country, and I have just made up my mind to move to the city. I am a pretty good cook and that is why I am writing to you. What I want to know is: Do many city people "keep" cooks?

Truly yours,

MARMA LADE.

Answer: They do not. But most people engage another as soon as one leaves.

Dear Mr. Wynn:

It isn't that I am opposed to a person playing cards for money, but I would like you to settle an argument between my wife and me. The question is, "Can an honest man play poker?"

Sincerely,

JACK O'DIAMONDS.

Answer: Of course he can, but he won't win.

Dear Mr. Wynn:

My father says the silliest things. For instance, last night he said his bald head was just like heaven. Don't you think that is a silly thing for a man my father's age to say?

Truly yours,

VAZZLE EEN.

Answer: I would say instead of being silly your dad is rather bright. The reason your father compares a bald head to heaven is that he simply means: "There is no parting there."

Dear Mr. Wynn:

I saw a man with both his hands bandaged and I asked him how it happened. He didn't answer me. I later found out the reason he didn't answer me was because he is deaf and dumb. I also heard his hands were bandaged because every joint in his fingers is broken. How do you account for an accident like that?

Sincerely,

DINAH MITE.

Answer: He is deaf and dumb, the

TO MY CHILD

By ANNE CAMPBELL

SOMETIME in years to come, when the strong sea Of life is threatening, with you afraid, I hope that courage comes with thoughts of me, And you recall the hope that ever made A green place in the desert of our lives. We have made much of little and been gay. When your own disillusionment arrives, Remember love that sweetened every day.

I wish I could build love into a wall So thick and high you never would be caught; In life's swift eddies... If you hear a call From a far place, it will express this thought: There was no road too difficult to take; There was no task too hard for your dear sake.

Fascinating Tunic Dress

Striking in material and motif is this fascinating new tunic dress. The fabric is navy blue taffeta with white polka dots. The suit is closely fitted at the hip and skirt, and cut with deep raglan sleeves, which are turned back at three-quarter length to form deep cuffs. Really stunning is the wide ruching which is made of self material, cut on the bias and fringed at the edges. Three rows are used on the tunic, another row forms the Pierrot collar, and the same ruching is used on the navy blue straw hat. A blue velvet bow is caught in the neck ruff, and a velvet ribbon carelessly knotted forms the belt. Navy blue suede was selected for bag and gloves, and matching kid for the pumps.

Short Separation May Calm Matrimonial Sea

The difficulties that wreck domestic happiness and bring husbands and wives to divorce courts have been discussed by Hubert S. Howe, M. D., in Good Housekeeping. The sane way to save marriage, he says, is by thoroughly understanding the hazards that threaten it, and preventing as many as you can, by common sense. "If an actual clash has occurred," he advises, "it may help you both to separate for a short time. Go to quiet spots where you can think things out. In the interim let each of you call up every fine trait of the man or woman you married, his or her difficulties, and the courage and patience with which they have been met. Let your thoughts dwell on the good times you have had together.

"Don't go where you will run into temptation—an unscrupulous man or woman who wants to create a triangle, or a mother who eggs on the conflict. Stay apart only long enough to regain poise. Then come back—to each other, to the home that belongs to you both, to the love that is there, if you both will recognize it—always waiting."

OUR ECONOMIC PROBLEM

We hear so much about "being in the red" with municipal, county and state government—or national, if you please—that we wonder if the country has gone "haywire." Extravagance, war, deviltry and graft are responsible for a lot of miscarriage in judgment, execution of service and leadership among men. First of all, government is a tremendous responsibility, and no leader of men can escape his large share. We are more or less leaders in some degree, and it is up to every person to be a good citizen. To be as much interested in public affairs as we are in our own private business transactions.

There is no doubt about it, someone has been delinquent in duty, of this country would not be where it is today. Whether it is administration, jurisprudence or legislation, someone is to blame. No free country like ours should suffer such a handicap in the progress of civilization.

It is a habit too easily formed for spending, borrowing and more spending. We cannot borrow ourself prosperous, these times, nor even indeed in prosperous times. Neither can we spend ourself rich. Our needs and wants are not the same, although we many times class them together. Trying to be thrifty, economical and wealthy by spending for what we think we want, but do not need, is the financial crime of the day. We are learning through the high tax bogie and debt burden that there is no relief or gain in such a course. Perhaps we can learn a lesson from Nebraska.

Nebraska is advertised as being a debtless state today; as a commonwealth where the law prohibits pledging the state's credit for more than $100,000; and also as a state which has ridden through war and peace, drouth and plenty, without issuing a dollar's worth of bonds.

It built a $10,000,000 state capital over a period of twelve years out of its annual tax levy. Its roads are paid for by a four-cent gasoline tax and motor vehicle license fees, plus the usual Federal aid.

Nebraska's government, aside from road building, is supported by a general property tax and it has no income or sales tax.

These facts seem to prove that a great state can be operated on a business basis and stay within its income.

Nebraska should be an object lesson. We are staggering today under issues to pay for political experiments and inefficiency which the coming generations will struggle to pay if they are ever wiped out. The taxpayers should rise up in arms, as it were, against practically every proposal that is made to further burden the people with taxes.

The lawmaker today who suggests tax increases as a way to meet state problems, is in most cases simply showing his inability as a business man to balance the public's business budget.

There are approximately 7000 young Japanese population who become of voting age this year and will cast their first ballot at the next election. They are all American born and have all the rights and privileges of citizenship; furthermore most of them are making splendid records in the public schools. While some naturally speak their own language, they all speak English; in fact very few can read a Japanese newspaper. As students, they manifest a keen interest in achieving an education, and this is equivalent to good citizenship. At present we have about 140,000 Japanese in the United States; 50,000 are made up of men and their wives—immigrants from the Orient. Some 18,000 are denied marriage because of the rigidity of immigration laws. Of the 72,000 remaining a large number are the children of the twenty-five thousand married couples mentioned above. Thus the largest class of young Japanese-Americans, is that now 13 years of age and fully half of the total are between the ages of 9 and 18.

There is a movement on foot to reclaim certain soils that have been "over-cropped," by taking the humus and productive elements away. In other words robbing the soil of its virtue, without its replenishment. How true this is in weak humanity, who tries to get all he can and not offer anything in return. To get the most out of the world, we invariably must do our best to put the most we can into the world. How much we need to practice the giving spirit if we ever hope to receive. Selfishness is a grievous error. The man in business, in order to grow and prosper, must first render more service, or give better wares, than he expects to get paid for. He must, in some manner, prove himself worthy before he is rewarded. This is a law that is demonstrated in every successful enterprise, whether it be personal or public.

California is a wonderful state in which to be born—much more to live and die in. We do not blame the throngs who visit and locate here, after considering the many natural hazards that beset the man or woman who must dwell, for instance in various sections of the east and middle-west. There should be very small reason for one to have a fit of discontent here in California; but to be all the more thankful for being here, where the four seasons blend together just like the four quarters of an apple, with the same flavor or climate, sunshine and purifying zephyrs that roll in off the ocean and mountains with such distilling purity. Many of us think that our El Dorado is most anywhere but where we live.

When you take into consideration that over a hundred thousand pounds of paper go into the manufacture of milk bottle caps every day, you get some idea of the immensity of the consumption of the humble lacteal fluid which goes for nourishment of the human body. The modern equipment and sanitary devices used in the preparation of milk for delivery, have made astonishing strides within the past decade.

What an enjoyable world this would be if every man was free to do as he pleased, so long as he obeyed civic laws, and was free to own all that he created. But would this tend to progressiveness and beneficial returns?

A NIGHT IN DIXIELAND

Don't forget the date you have at the new Ocean Beach school auditorium tonight at eight o'clock, for if you miss seeing those North Park Minstrels you will regret it. Remember it is full of laughs from the very beginning to the end, so tell your friends and neighbors and let's pack the house and by so doing help the American Legion take care of those needy families in our midst. We must not forget that all thru the year we have them with us as well as at the winter holiday season and it is by offering real entertainment for your enjoyment that we of the Legion are able to carry on our program of relief and community betterment. Doors open at seven thirty; come early and get a good seat.

At the regular monthly meeting of the Post last night a plan for a cleaning up campaign for the Exposition was presented to the post and given to our representative in the Chamber of Commerce, E. E. Steele, who he will in turn present to that body at their meeting Monday evening. Should they adopt it we hope the people of Ocean Beach will get behind it and make our section one of the bright spots during the year and by so doing make the visitors want to stay here.

Oh! Oh! Oh! We almost forgot to mention that in addition to the minstrels the local Legion quartet will sing some of those good old southern songs, so once again we warn you not to miss seeing this show.

EAST SAN DIEGO CLUB
ATTENDS WEDNESDAY MEET

Wednesday noon luncheon of Kiwanis at Ocean Beach was held in the elementary school cafeteria with thirty-one present.

George Kerrigan, president east San Diego club was in attendance with more than a dozen members of his organization. The visiting club conducted the program which was a lively affair from the first sound of the bell.

John Valleau, a past president of east San Diego club, was the speaker of the day, having for his subject, Making Faces or Making Shadows. His talk was mighty interesting and sincere, dealing with the building for the best in man and boy. A salient point of his talk was the character of men, that character was formed by habits, and habits formed by environment. Therefore we would say, be careful of these two important factors, habits and association, and then we will build the right character.

Next week's meeting of our local club will be on Tuesday evening, a ladies night with a highly interesting program already arranged, and dinner under the new management at the Loma Tavern.

POST No. 2415

AND AUXILIARY

A good time was had by all at the annual winter stag party held at the post hall on Feb. 28. "Doc Stevens" was very much on the job and all in all it seemed pretty much like happy days are here again.

The next regular meeting of the post will be held March 14 at which time several very important matters will be passed upon. Therefore set aside that evening and make it a point to be there.

"The Young Ruler" will be the Sunday school lesson for this Sunday. All children are cordially invited to learn more about this "rich young man".

Special Wednesday Services

THE THEOSOPHICAL SOCIETY: POINT LOMA

"The Golden Rule" will be the theme of the forum-lecture at the Theosophical Headquarters, Point Loma, next Sunday afternoon at three o'clock. The speaker will be Dr. Henry T. Edge, vice president of Theosophical University and for 34 years dean of the teaching staff at the Theosophical institute. Dr. Edge also has the distinction of being one of the very few surviving personal pupils of the principal founder of the Theosophical Society, H. P. Blavatsky. While studying for honors in science at Cambridge University, England, some 47 years ago, Dr. Edge met her and became a member of the Theosophical Society, to which he has devoted his life ever since.

On the platform with Dr. Edge, to assist in answering question, will be Inez Davenport, organist at the Temple of Peace and music instructor in Lomaland school. Mrs. Davenport was educated at Point Loma from childhood.

Says Dr. Edge: "I shall show that the Golden Rule is not confined to Christianity, but is universal; that it is not a mere unattainable ideal or an emotional conception, but rests on a knowledge of the real nature of man, as taught by the world's sages. It will help the efforts of philanthropists and reformers if they understand its rationale; that man is essentially divine; that all that lives is united and interblended. The real teachings were taught by the earliest Christian fathers and the Gnostics."

BAPTIST CHURCH SERVICES

Rev. W. S. Dunn's sermon subject for next Sunday morning will be "Glorying in the Cross" and in the evening service at 7:30 o'clock the topic will be "The Morning After". The choir will render special music at both services.

HELPLESSNESS WITHOUT DISPLAY

Matthew 6—1-4

Take heed that ye do not your alms before men, to be seen of them: otherwise ye have no reward of your Father which is in heaven. 2. Therefore when thou doest thine alms, do not sound a trumpet before thee, as the hypocrites do in the synagogues and in the streets, that they may have glory of men. Verily I say unto you, They have their reward. 3. But when thou doest alms, let not thy left hand know what thy right hand doeth: 4. That thine alms may be in secret: and thy Father which seeth in secret himself shall reward thee openly.

CHURCHES OF CHRIST, SCIENTIST

"Man" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon on Sunday in all Christian Science churches, branches of The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Mass. The Golden Text is from the Psalms: "The steps of a good man are ordered by the Lord: and he delighteth in his way."

One of the Bible citations in the Lesson-Sermon, from The Book of Job, states: "If iniquity be in thine hand, put it far away and let not wickedness dwell in thy tabernacles. For then shalt thou lift up thy face without spot; yea, thou shalt be steadfast, and shalt not fear: because thou shalt forget thy misery, and remember it as waters that pass away: and thine age shall be clearer than the noonday; thou shalt shine forth, thou shalt be as the morning."

A passage from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy, states: "Beauty, as well as truth, is eternal; but the beauty of material things passes away, fading and fleeting as mortal belief. Custom, education, and fashion form the transient standards of mortals. Immortality, exempt from age or decay, has a glory of its own,—the radiance of Soul."

"An inquest was held, on Don's story a warrant was issued for McManus and so it stands, after all these years."

He rubbed his face again.
"Now, that's that. The thing that's stuck in the minds of some of us is this: that McManus, under no circumstances, ever showed a quarrelsome streak, let alone giving evidence of being a killer. However,"—with a shrug—"he'd been on a long, long drunk."

He paused and shook his head. Then went on:

"Brandon carried on the partnership and his own interests, buying his own logs in the name of the firm and sawing them in the mill. He bought right and left, left and right. As soon as another man would plan to operate here Brandon would try to buy him out. If he couldn't buy at his own figure things commenced to happen to that man. . . . Duval has figured in a good many failures!"—nodding profoundly. "The man seemed to be obsessed by the idea that he must own all the timber in the locality."

"Finally it came down to this one piece, owned by McManus, which was the last which Brandon wanted and that he didn't have. He commenced to jockey so he could get title to it. Homer Campbell was judge of probate then. Nick went to Homer with a petition to have McManus declared legally dead so the estate could be probated and this timber disposed of. Mac had been gone seven years and such an arrangement could be brought about according to law, you see."

"However, Homer got the notion that Brandon was a mite too anxious, satisfied himself that while Brandon was getting rich personally the partnership was in a bad way, and decided that he wouldn't be a party to any scheme to rob an estate."

"That ended Homer politically. Nick put up another candidate and trimmed us properly and we knew that when the new judge came in he'd take orders from Brandon. So Homer surprised Brandon by reopening the McManus matter, declaring him legally dead and appointed me administrator for the estate and guardian for Dawn."

His stomach shook with his chuckling at that.
"Nick was pretty mad, all right! I commenced to pry into things, found that the partnership books certainly did look bad and decided to take a licking there and sold out the McManus interest. We were stung, all right, but there was no use squealing. I took the money, paid up the mortgage on the Hoot Owl, sent Dawn off to school in the East where she wouldn't be known as the daughter of a murderer—a cloud which was misshaping her whole life—and tried to make some money for her."

"That's how it stands to date. I've failed. We're on the ragged edge; the estate right now, considering the location of this timber in Brandon's territory as a liability, is insolvent. Dawn's had to come back here to live where she's unhappy and what's ahead of us depends on you."

Ben gave a wry smile.
"This killing thing, now. . . . Did anybody ever suspect Brandon?"
Able shook his head.

"Faxon and McManus were alone. And McManus disappeared. I know what's in your mind, Ben. But there was nothing to support the suspicion. He sat silent a moment and then asked drily:
"Haven't read old Don's letter yet?"
"Not yet."

"A stitch in time, you know. . . . And Brandon was afraid of Don on account of something in the past."

Ben grinned. "I'm superstitious. I don't like to use all I've got until I have to; don't even like to look at my hole card."

"Well, it's your message, that letter; your property," Able said. "And the nut's going to get tougher fast. I hate to think what'd happen if we had to stop saving for two or three days right now." A shutdown certainly would put temper into the shell of the nut, Ben, and—

He stopped short. Into the stillness of the room came a muffled shout. Ben started to his feet and Able turned a bewildered face in the direction of the sound.

"Fire!" a walling voice cried. "The mill's on fire!"

Puller could be heard bounding from his bed in the next room. Able lurched to the door to see Ben Elliott flying toward the mill-yard, silhouetted against the dull glow of angry flame which showed through cracks in the mill.

The wide doorways to the ground floor were rectangles of dull orange. The fire was in there, beneath the deck, under the carriage, eating into the very vitals of the mill.

A water barrel stood beneath the slide. Its bucket dangling from a stick laid across the top, but the barrel was empty. Ben seized the bucket, smashed the thin ice that had formed over the hot pond, filled his pail and rushed through the open doorways into the smoke. He had a clear sense of Ben's voice crying the alarm and of an swelling shouts as the men began turning out of their blankets.

Ben soused his bucket of water into the heart of the burning area and it scattered the blaze with whooshing sound. The flame did not go out; it only scattered. A belch of steam screened it for an instant, putting a blot on the savage brilliance, but in the next breath the flame had hold again, licking hungrily through the water, bordering the orange glow with red and blue streamers.

His eyes and his reason told him, then, what his nostrils had failed to register in his first excitement.

"Gasoline!" he panted as he ran out, colliding with Buller in the doorway. "Somebody touched her off! . . . Soaked with gasoline in there. . . . Look, it's spreading fast!"

The fire was spreading, and no mistaking the fact. Through the smoke they could see the flames leaping from the ceiling and then spreading, right and left and ahead, thwarted momentarily by heavy planks in their dance but, by that very stoppage, given fresh food for growth.

Men were coming, shouting as they ran through the darkness. In all stages of partial dress they came, crowding close to Elliott and Buller.

"Stand still, you, and keep still!" Ben snapped. "You, McFee, and you and you,"—pointing to individuals. "Roll that barrel of salt up from the sliding. Now! Snap into it!"

"You and you and you,"—indicating other men—"get every bucket in the place. Water buckets from the barrels in the yard and along the tramways, pails from houses, kettles, anything that'll hold and carry water."

"You, there; get me an ax and a shovel. Snappy, now!"

His voice had bite to it and as he tolled the men off for these explicit errands, they went on the run.

"Buller! Get upstairs and knock up, some big, some small, now and then one that leaked away its precious contents. Fire found hold on the edges of the hole Buller had made in the floor. Little tongues of flame ate into the dry wood and curled upward. To Buller's right a finger of fire crept up between two boards; beyond it another appeared. In a dozen places fire was coming through the floor and Buller, swaying on his feet as he coughed, turned to the next man in dismay.

"He said . . ." he choked. "Got to have air! Move up!"
The line moved up. The man who had taken Buller's place soused a bucket of water across the floor, knocking down those tendrils that wormed through from below. Then he attacked the uprushing column of flame again.

Down below Ben Elliott had the heart of the burning litter a writhing mass of saffron smoke. He started out, fell and crawled to the entry, got his knees beneath him and retched again and again. His eyes smarted madly by heavy tears; he coughed as he vomited and it seemed as though he never would find strength to rise. But he did after a moment and renewed his attack.

The gasoline soaked litter was blanketed by its layer of salt, but overhead belting blazed and fire was finding hold in uprights and cross timbers.

"Here, you! Three men. . . . Two buckets each!" Ben croaked as he ran out to the foot of the slide.

"Throw it high, and hard. So!" he cried hoarsely and flung the first water himself with a wide, sweeping, overhead swing. It knocked fire off the nigger, blotted out an orange panel on a heavy sill. "Now, you!" he cried to the next man.

They filled their own buckets and that duty took them into the fresh air, cleared their lungs, kept the nausea down, steadied both legs and heads.

SYNOPSIS

Ben Elliott—from "Yonder"—arrives at the lumbering town of Tincup, with Don Stuart, old, very sick man, whom he has befriended. He defeats Bull Duval, "king of the river," and town bully, in a log-birling contest. Nicholas Brandon, the town's leading citizen, resents Stuart's presence, trying to force him to leave town and Elliott, resenting the act, knocks him down. Elliott is arrested. He finds a friend in Judge Able Armitage. The judge hires him to run the one lumber camp, the Hoot Owl, that Brandon has not been able to grab. This belongs to Dawn McManus, daughter of Brandon's old partner, who has disappeared with a murder charge hanging over his head. Brandon sends his bully, Duval, to beat up Ben, and Ben worsts him in a fist fight and throws him out of camp. Don Stuart dies, leaving a letter for Elliott "to be used when the going becomes too tough." Ben refuses to open the letter, believing he can win the fight by his own efforts.

a hole in the floor, to the left of the saw. Couple of boards wide. So long,—measuring with his spread hands. "We've got to get that flame drawing straight up instead of mush-rooming all over the floor bottom. Form the rest of your men into a bucket brigade and pass water up the slide. . . . Fast as you can! Don't anybody think about anything but sending up full buckets and taking down empty ones. You stand by the hole, Buller, and knock her down as she comes through. Not so fast, now, that you spill water and drop pails. Hold your heads and your feet. It's our only chance to lick it. . . . Like, now!"

Grunting and cursing, four huskies came lugging the barrel of salt and Ben, trying to still his excited breathing, snapped his fingers as he waited for their arrival.

"Gasoline!" he shouted to Able, seeing him for the first time. "Water won't touch it! We've got to smother it and we can't get sand handy and salt should do, if Buller can hold her when she sticks her head through the floor!"

"Up here, boys! Close, now!" Ben heaved on the heavy barrel of salt himself, rolling it in to the doorway which led directly into the fire. "All right. . . . Jake! Into the bucket line, all of you!" He swung his ax on a wire hoop and the barrel popped open. He struck again to clear away staves and drove a dozen quick blows into the lumpy salt that spilled out, to pulverize it.

Next he grabbed up his shovel, scooped it full and disappeared into the smoke.

His eyes smarted but he took his time, blinked and surveyed the fire. Then he swung his shovel upward and sideways and sent its burden in a plastering, spattering smear at the center of a particularly hot spot. The blue-green-orange combination of living fire gave up at once to a saffron smudge.

Ben leaped into the open again, breathed deeply, filled his shovel and doing his best to hold his breath, edged back into the smoke. He drove that shovel of salt hard upon flame, too, and retreated at once. A dozen trips, and he had the flame down in an area the size of a blanket. He worked to the right, then, going further into the mill, coughing and reeling, and when he emerged that time he retched painfully. He stood over his salt pile a moment, gulping fresh air while nausea shook him. He breathed quickly, forcing his lungs to pump deep and fast, sending clearing life through his arteries. His head steadied, he scooped up more salt and compressed his lips against the shaking coughs, ducked into the mill.

Faster and faster the buckets came

With hissing splashes the water from their pails went sloshing against the overhead woodwork and gradually the glare through the thick smoke subsided.

"Getting her!" Ben panted as Able tried to say something to him. "Getting her!" He coughed and his words had come in a half strangle but, even so, the exultation in his tone was unmistakable.

Smoke on the ground floor thinned somewhat. Men ran further into the building with their water, took a bit more time in throwing it. Again salt was used down below to cover hot little islands in the litter. Up above more water was thrown across the floor to kill flames in the cracks.

Living flame no longer leaped and roared through the hole in the floor. Thick smoke swept upward but that was all and as Ben ran up the icy slide for the first time and saw this he cried out:

"Good work, Buller! Over there, though; look!"

Fire had taken fresh hold in a greasy timber and was working its way up beneath the trimmer saw. Buller dashed a half dozen pails of water on the spot and it went black.

"Keep going, Buller!" Ben cried. "I'll take half your men."

He went slipping down the slide and at the bottom called men from the bucket line.

"Stretch out, the rest of you!" he called. "Now, this way, you kids; in here and mop her up, and make it fast!"

Stubborn flames ate into the litter on the ground floor. Again and again they broke out, but the driving heat was gone, roaring gases no longer gave impetus to the spread of destruction as the first need for speed became less imperative.

Not until the final curl of smoke had been subdued completely did Ben Elliott relax. Then, with lantern lighted, he entered the saw floor, completely ice glazed, charred in places, and surveyed the damage. As he swung his lantern and looked about, peering at timbers eaten half away, at burned belting, at other vital damage, he moved slowly, said little, as a man will who is thinking soberly.

He stopped beside Able Armitage finally.
"Well, the insurance'll cover it," the old justice said, as if trying to make the best of things.

Ben laughed shortly.
"But she's two weeks idle at the inside. And belting gone and a good many other things. If—
"Say, chum!"

It was the night watchman, sheathed in flakes of ice from his waist down, whom Ben hailed.

"Where were you?"
"Eating, when it broke out." Ben only nodded. The watchman, by long custom, went to the boarding house kitchen for his midnight meal where food was kept warm for him. "I went through the yard and the mill, just like you've told me to do. I looked in at the boiler the last thing. I hadn't been out of here ten minutes before I just happened to glance through the window and see it."

"Yeah. Gasoline starts in a hurry." "Gasoline!" the watchman croaked.

"Sure." Ben laughed drily. "The ground floor was drenched with it. They'd scraped rubbish into piles and soaked them, too. They almost did a good job. Almost five minutes' start, or if I hadn't happened to see a garage fire put out with salt once where nothing else was handy to smother it, and it'd have been all day with us."

He rubbed his chin, thoughtfully.
"Didn't see anybody? Or hear anybody?"

"Not a soul or a sound." Elliott looked up. No snow was falling.

"Buller!" he called. The foreman, face blackened, eyebrows gone, came up at his call. "Herd this crew in close. It snowed early in the evening. Maybe I'll want to do a job of trailing and I don't want tracks all over the country."

He did his job of trailing. The fresh tracks of a single man led away from the trampled snow about the mill toward decks of logs. The tracks went out along the sliding toward town but Ben did not follow far. He stopped when he found a three-gallon demijohn badly concealed beneath the end of a log. He sniffed its neck and nodded grimly. The fuel of an incendiary had been carried to the mill in that container.

"And now," Able said, after he also had sniffed the bottle in Buller's house, "what's to be done?" He tried to smile but deep trouble was in his old eyes.

For the first time since he had come to Hoot Owl Ben Elliott shook his head dubiously as he dropped into a chair. He was both grave and troubled. "They're getting the least bit rough," he observed.

"Rather rough, I'd say!" Able's face flared suddenly in righteous wrath. "Don't Nick Brandon! I'd give a good deal to hang this night's work on him!"

Ben laughed briefly. "Don't hope for miracles yet," he advised.

"It'll take no less than a miracle now to pull us through. Two weeks to get the mill running? Benny, in that time we'll be busted wide open! They'll have a case against me, I'll be walked as administrator and the timber will be at Brandon's mercy."

"Yeah. . . . Wide open . . . and at his mercy."

Able rose and paced the small room, hands in his hip pockets. He came to a halt before Elliott and eyed him narrowly. He stood so a moment as if in debate with self.

"We had a fire," he said. "Not the kind you fight with fire, exactly. . . . But old Don told Bird-Eye that you'd have to use fire to fight another kind with, didn't he?"

Ben smiled slowly.
"You're thinking of the old timer's letter, eh? . . . Well, maybe . . . But we're not licked yet. Something may turn up. No, I guess I won't use whatever it was Stuart gave me just yet!"

The old man shook his head and resumed his pacing.

"What can turn up to give us a fighting chance, now?" he muttered.

TO BE CONTINUED

Fresh Air Required

The amount of air required for each person in a room varies greatly with the circumstances. The factors determining the proper amount are number of people, type of lighting fixtures and other sources of heat, and construction of the building or room. The standard figure used by ventilating engineers is 1,800 cubic feet per person per hour, which is usually considered a minimum.

GIANT SERPENTS

The Smithsonian Institution in Washington is in possession of evidence that sea serpents as large as the biggest of living land snakes once swam in the offshore waters near the present site of the National Capital. This is in the form of a single fossil vertebra of backbone joint, picked up on Bevelere beach, Va. By comparing this one bone with those of living serpents, the United States National museum has estimated that the Virginia sea serpent must have been about 25 feet long and thick in proportion, which would be a very good size even for a python today. Remnants of contemporary sea dwelling serpents almost as large as the Virginia specimen have been unearthed in New Jersey and Alabama.

A CHILD'S LAXATIVE SHOULD BE LIQUID

(Ask any doctor)

For your own comfort, and for your children's safety and future welfare, you should read this:

The bowels cannot be helped to regularly by any laxative that can't be regulated as to dose. That is why doctors use liquid laxatives.

A liquid laxative can always be taken in the right amount. You can gradually reduce the dose. Reduced dosage is the secret of real and safe relief from constipation.

The right liquid laxative dose gives the right amount of help. When repeated, instead of more each time, you take less. Until bowels are moving regularly and thoroughly without any help at all.

The liquid laxative generally used is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It contains senna and cascara, natural laxatives that form no habit—even in children. Its action is gentle, but sure. It will clear up a condition of biliousness or sluggishness without upset. Every druggist has it.

"She was affected about two months before I used Cuticura Soap and Ointment, and after using them about three weeks you could not tell she ever had this condition." (Signed) Mrs. Neal Gladney, R. F. ## WEAK, MISERABLE?

Mrs. Mary Benter of 1379 Walnut St., San Bernardino, Calif., said: "Some years ago I felt so weak I could hardly do my housework. I could scarcely sleep at night and would awake mornings feeling tired and depressed. My head ached and I also had an ache in the small of my back. I used Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and felt fine in every way." All druggists. Write to Dr. Pierce's Clinic, Buffalo, N. Y., for free medical advice.

WATCH YOUR KIDNEYS!

Be Sure They Properly Cleanse the Blood

YOUR kidneys are constantly filtering impurities from the blood stream. But kidneys get functionally disturbed—log in their work—fail to remove the poisonous body wastes.

Then you may suffer nagging backache, attacks of dizziness, burning, scanty or too frequent urination, getting up at night, swollen feet and ankles, rheumatic pains; feel "all worn out."

Don't delay! For the quicker you get rid of these poisons, the better your chances of good health.

Use Doan's Pills. Doan's are for the kidneys only. They tend to promote normal functioning of the kidneys; should help them pass off the irritating poisons. Doan's are recommended by users the country over. Get them from any druggist.

COME

Aggressive war is born of selfishness and fear. It is nurtured by pride and hatred. It's annihilation, however, seemingly humanly and prophetically impossible is the vital issue before the world today. Separated from doctrine and dogma, the pure principles of the Ten Commandments and the Sermon on the Mount must be woven into the warp and woof of any practical plan which shall bring enduring peace to a war crazed earth.

In a strangely wonderful and sincerely moving way, the silent voice of the soul of all people must rise in a surge of utterable intensity as the unspoken prayer to the Almighty for the speedy fulfillment of His Messianic plan whereby the citadel of strife and hatred shall be stormed and war's agonies and hatreds fade before the universal solvent of love of man for man in the splendid dawning of Christ's thousand years of peace.

A new tocsin sounds in the listening ears attuned of America today. It is the tocsin of the church, not of aggressive war nor the spineless pacifism; but of that resurgent echo of harmony and hope divine, caught up from the chorus of the Herald Angels, singing through the starlit heavens long ago, above the Judean hills to the shepherds of their flocks, "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth. Peace. Goodwill to men."

To the shepherds of Spiritual and Temporal authority in whose keeping rests today the safe-folding of the children of men from the distresses and slaughters of war, there comes now the opportunity and the benediction of creating the spirit of prayer in one universal petition and supplication for the peace of all people in the one fold of the Father after endless years of strife.
